ALIENS™ CLASS II POWER LOADER WITH RIPLEY

AT LAST! The POWER LOADER finally makes it into kit form. This has been a long and very protracted project which has been eagerly awaited by everyone involved with it here at Halcyon, and hopefully by you the modeller. We would like to thank Miss Sigourney Weaver for giving us her permission for the use of the character "RIPLEY" and also for allowing us to use her likeness on the box art. At her request a royalty from each kit sale is being donated on your behalf to the Digit Fund Charity, more of which you can read about in the article written by Miss Weaver, opposite. It is important to remember that no future depicted in any movie we watch, is possible without taking care of the present we have today. Thank you for your help.

Dear Friend:

It's been more than four years since I was in Rwanda filming "Gorillas in the Mist."

A day does not go by without my thinking of my friends, the mountain gorillas, and wondering how they are.

I think of Maggie, the mischievous young female who was such a ham for the cameras. And I thought I was an actress!

I think of Jozi, a delicate little female who used to croon sweetly to herself as she munched on wild celery.

I think of the Karisoke Research Center and all the hard working scientists who happily endure months of cold, wet weather and bad food in order to study the gorillas. I envy them.

I think of Dian's cabin which has sadly fallen into disrepair.

A lot has happened in the last four years. The film has come out and been a big success world wide. The video is doing very well. More and more people come up to me to ask me what they can do to help save the gorillas. Children and adults alike are touched by this story.

For the last year, the Parc du Virungas where the gorillas live has been the site of a bloody civil war. What impact this war will have on the health and well-being of the gorillas, we don't know. But it won't be good.

What can you do?

A lot.

We need funds to continue the anti-poaching patrols - that's essential - and the veterinarian in residence program. We also must continue the research program.

In the last four years, the gorillas have been hit hard.

My dear friend Jozi caught her hand in a poacher's snare in 1988. In typical gorilla fashion, she hid her injury from human observers. When it was finally discovered, there was nothing that veterinarian Barkley Hastings could do. Jozi died.

I think of Jozi daily. I think of all the children she would have had and what a loving mother she would have been.

I think . . . perhaps if we could have afforded one more anti-poaching patrol, would that have saved her?

We desperately need your support if we are to maintain the strides we've made. The outpouring of concern alone will not keep the gorillas alive.

What will?

Anti-poaching patrols will.

The continuation of the veterinary program will.

We hope also to rebuild Dian's cabin so that it may be used as a working library and resource center for the researchers at Karisoke.

It would also be a memorial for Dian, who spent 18 years of her life there before she was killed.

I ask you to contribute generously to our cause.

My gorilla friend Maggie gave birth in 1989 to a bouncing male infant named Sanuurra or, in English, "Rainy Weather."

Please help me give Maggie and her son a fighting chance. Protect them with rangers and with medical supervision. Don't let our film end up an unwitting memorial to an extinct species.

Please give what you can. We are making a difference between life and death there. Give us your support.

Won't you join me in making a special donation for our very important needs? Yours in saving the gorillas.
